SALVATION ARMY

A man may be down, but he is never out

The Salvation Army campaign will end on next Saturday, May 29th.

The campaign on that day will be in charge of several popular young ladies from this place. Valuable prizes have been offered by some of the merchants to the ones collecting the most dollars, and as this city is much below its quota, let us get be-MAKING GOOD IN INDIANA hind this movement and put Mont-Isaac T. Rogers, Jr., now of In- gomery County up to her place at the front, and help this Christian organization to do more effective work than ever before. By a generous response to this call the Salvation Army will be free to put its whole effort into its work for the poor, the unfortunate and the misfit.

The blue-bonneted lassies need not any longer take time from the bedside of the sick, from the homes of those in want, to pass the tambourine collection box for the pennies, dimes and nickels with which to maintain the Army's activities.

In a statement signed by every member of the Fiscal Court, in reta-

Court described as "A very pressing and vital question," and one that "cannot be postponed for long,"

the Fiscal Court stated in effect that the highways under discussion had

"literally ruined" by one winter's wear.

After stating that the county has only about twenty-five thousand dollars a year for the maintenance of all turnpikes, dirt roads and bridges, and that the Fiscal Court could not use any material better than macadam, which, again in the language of the Court,

"will not stand the heavy motor usage of today," and that "the situation will grow worse each year," and further that "a macadam road rebuilt at a cost of from five to eight thousand dollars a mile will not withstand one winter's wear," after making those statements the Fiscal Court made this impressive as-

"These are facts and we might as well face them squarely and look for a solution. The only solution, as we see it, is the employment of one of the several kinds of material harder and more durable than macadam. To do this, however, requires the expenditure of money and lots

This statement by the Fiscal Court further went on to explain how the levying of a 20-cent tax for ten years tion to the road situation, which the could be used in helping to hasten the work referred to.

> The Advocate does not go as far as some of the people in 10-3 respect. The Advocate is not in favor of and will oppose this additional 20-cent tax, Furthermore it is not necessary in obtaining the construction of these roads by the State.

It is true that back several weeks ago many thought it would be helpful, or advisable, among them being the Scatinel-Democrat, which in its issue of April 15, advocated the adoption of the bond issue to the limit and another twenty-cent road tax in addition, for ten years.

Ten years from now the roads will have been constructed by the State, whether or not Montgomery loans this $300,000 to the State. The only purpose an additional 20-cent levy could possibly serve might be to defeat the bond issue. It is not reasonable to seek to impose this further tax on the people when a single 20-cent levy for only a few years will accomplish the desired end, The Fiscal Court, in this statement, said in conclusion: "We are for good roads. and submit this question for the thoughtful consideration of our citizens and taxpayers, in the hope that it may be productive of good results.'
